

December 14, 2009

Click Here to Watch A local elementary school is helping to make Christmas a little more merry for veterans. U.S Congressman Jason Altmire started this project and invited schools across western Pennsylvania to make cards for veterans. Altmire visited a third grade class at Rogers Primary School in Glenshaw to thank them for their cards.

Altmire: "This is incredibly important because it gives them opportunity to express how thankful they are for the sacrifices these men and women have made. We're going to take these cards to VA hospitals in Pittsburgh and Butler to people who aren't going to be able to make it home for the holidays."

More than 200 students at Rogers Primary made holiday cards for veterans this season.

- WPXI-TV